Senior Class History

Like all other the graduating class of 1942 started the arduous journey through the famous halls of OHS with vigor and passion. We did not know what was in store for us, but we caught the spirit of the hour and proud but somewhat puzzled, ran to our classes. The first year was spent in becoming acquainted with the rules and regulations of the school. The fact that most of us never lost the first day only proves that we were born out.

But when we climbed up a step higher to the eighth we really began to put our foot into things, particularly in our mouth. Why? Because the upperclassmen became jealous. Yes, jealous of our great talents. Mark Flater and Anna Mary Steele were the first to break to the heights by having their themes published in the TORCHLIGHT.

Then we became freshmen. This year our great dramatic talents were first presented to the public. Five of us went to the semi-finals in the annual speech contest. They were Frank Lewis, Douglas Lott, Avonelle Chaffin, Patsy Loomis, and John Bort. Not only were we outstanding in the field of public speaking, but we also held top place on the honor roll. It was during this year that the pep squad in OHS really began to organize and it was the hard work of the freshmen that put the club on its feet.

But we did not come into our own until we reached the tenth grade. Never was there such a sophomore class. We really started popping. All the assembly plays were star-studded with sophomore thespians. Douglas Lott won the original oration award at commencement. But we took scholastic honors, as well. Nelle Williams received the Latin award and Anna Pauline Fosdyke received honorable mention. It was during that year that Donald Lebow showed to the rest of the school that the class of '42 was going to take OHS athletics to the top. The musical world began to hear of the talents of Claude Arnold, Albert Pierce, and Minifred Barry.

When we became juniors, we scaled enormous heights. But it was no small wonder with such capable class officers as Donald Lebow, Douglas Lott and Albert Pierce.

Junior Play

In the excitement of the graduation of the seniors, we are likely to forget another important group—a group that has worked hard and must wait another year before claiming glory.

The junior class of 1942 was a remarkable group. Under the capable leadership of its class officers, Harley Harris, president; Carolyn Gannon, vice-president, and Bill McLeod, secretary, the class moved forward to its record-breaking goals.

The outstanding achievement of the year was the junior play "Midnight", a mystery thriller in three acts which drew

Proceeds from junior plays always go for the annual junior-senior banquet. This year's juniors fairly outdid themselves on Friday May 16 at the Methodist Church. The theme of the banquet was "Maytime", with appropriate decoration in springlike pastels and softly colored lights. The theme was complete even to the person of Carolyn Gannon. The senior remembers such an outstanding banquet. Junior class sponsors for the year were Mr. Badg, Miss Ingman, Miss McLouth, Mr. Penny, Mrs. Thomson, and Miss Wright.

During their three years the juniors has a right to be proud of this crop of students. As they enter the home stretch, we all extend our wishes to

O.H.S. BAND

The Oberlin Music department has brought to a successful and interesting year.

Beginning the year with a new band director the band has it do made history for itself. The spectacular performances during the football games with red, white and blue lights will bring before the world by marching band review. The band attended three of the out of town football games, chartering a bus to the Tulsa Central game.

Boeing from the band attended the Annual Santa Claus Parade held in Tulsa each year.

Then in the early days we headed our school

Lucas was elected president, Fred Watson, vice-president and Patsy Lontons, secretary. We received a popular program by having a football queen elected by the student body. Then with the spring came the eagerly waited senior play, "Skidding." The cast included such well-known girls as Alice L. Jones, Allene L.
Lyon, Helenis, Fred Watson, Mary Louise Holley, Patsy Lontons, Marjory Blodgetfield, Addison Sessions, John Lenox, and Mark Flater. Many claimed that this was the greatest production ever witnessed in the dramatic history of OHS. The class proved to be "true blue Americans" by investing the proceeds of the play in United States War Bonds. Only through the wonderful efforts of Miss Middlebrook, Miss R. C., Miss Martha Johnson, Miss Norma Dunbar, Mr. L. L. Wright, and Mr. Henry B. F. the sum of $1,000.00 has been attained. This memorial to the school proves that the class is good American material. Last but far from least, the school was honored to have seven athletic Superiors from the senior class. They received letters because of their outstanding work in football, basketball, and track. They are Claude Arnold, Maurice Altstatt, Basil Barkdale, Harry Clegg, Donald Lebow, Robbie Lykins, and Addison S.
Schoen.

And now as we draw near the end of our illustrious year, we think back with fond memories. They are many, but we will only speak of the best. We only sparkly them. Now, as we approach our coming graduation, let us remember that we are the full flaming torches of the world. If the path be stormy, the flame shall not wane but will burn with the same unflinching spirit that has been the sentiment in our eventful yet brief sojourn in Okmulgee High School.
